Subject:DEUTSCH HDP20 Series, Plug and Receptacles

Description of Change: Material Change. The Industrial & Commercial Transportation (ICT) business unit of TE Connectivity (TEC) intends to implement a material change on two internal components, terminal retaining insert & terminal socket front insert in HDP20- all arrangements, size 18 & 24 connectors. The current material is unfilled PEI and the new material will be PA46 30% glass filled. Also molding improvements features (including core outs) have been added to the socket front inserts for 24-9, 24-91, 24-14, 24-18, 24-19 & 24-21. PPAP package will be offered by customer request once a sufficient inventory bank is built to prevent any delay. Product drawings are not affected.

Reason: Product Improvement. Dear Customer, we inform you of this material change as part of our aggressive continuous improvement efforts. PEI is a single source material with global demand in excess of supply. The material supplier is restricting all consumers buying allotment. The allotted level to TEC is at a level where product production is impacted. The change will be managed by TEC TS16949 quality procedures. The change does not affect the fit, form and function of the connectors. The change has been validated with manufacturing and laboratory testing. The terminal retention retainers manufactured from the new material have the same performance of the current material. An internal release based on our specifications will be executed before any parts are delivered. IMPORTANT: Both revisions of these parts can be used interchangeably in the field. This change is being phased-in gradually and the previous revision can remain stocked until use.

Impact of Change:form - fit - function
